MR. KITTREDGE'S LETTER

DEAR ALUMNI:

The questions on every old boy's lips these days are: How did the Rector injure himself? How is he getting along? When will he be back in his study again? In this letter I shall undertake to answer these questions.

On July 11th Mrs. Nash and the Rector were taking a walk in the woods along-shore at no great distance from their house in Perry, Maine. They reached a low ledge of rock, not more than five or six feet high, down which the Rector began to climb in order to get to the beach. One spot on the rock was wet—there may have been a patch of marine growth there—and Mr. Nash slipped on this and fell to the beach, landing hard on his spine on the pebbles.

He was in great pain, but with Mrs. Nash's help he hobbled to a point where he could be reached by the family beach wagon. He was taken to a local hospital, where an X-ray showed no disturbing conditions. A subsequent X-ray, however, revealed a cracked vertebra, which meant a hard journey in an ambulance to the Phillips House in Boston. This journey was made, albeit with considerable discomfort; the doctors put Mr. Nash in a plaster cast but did not regard the injury as particularly serious. Mr. Nash's view may have been different, because he suffered very greatly for the first few days in this cast, but by degrees he grew used to it and in time was able to walk around. It looked as though all were well with him, and on August 8th the doctor told him to go back to Perry and enjoy the rest of the summer there.

A carpenter constructed a wooden frame to support his back while he lay in his stateroom on the train, and the journey was made, on the whole successfully, the Rector being more than delighted that his troubles were behind him. The next morning, however, he had a severe stitch in his side and some temperature. Mrs. Nash became alarmed and decided that he must go back to Boston without delay. The ambulance was again called into service, and the long drive began. The less said about this journey the better; throughout all of it Mr. Nash was desperately sick and was suffering greatly. He was immediately put on the danger list when at last he reached the hospital. The cause of his setback, it now appeared, was a blood clot, and the doctors, fearing that others might form, performed an operation which has only recently been invented—the severing of the large vein which leads from each leg into the rest of the circulatory system. The purpose of this operation was to prevent further blood clots from forming.

It succeeded; and in spite of some very ticklish weeks, Mr. Nash slowly improved. After a month without any significant setback, his improvement became so rapid that soon after the opening of School he was able to walk slowly around his room in the hospital. This exercise did him so much good that his improvement became more rapid still, and on September 30th Mr. Banta—who has a particularly spacious and comfortable car—drove down from the School, picked him and Mrs. Nash up at the Phillips House, and brought them back to the Rectory. The Rector walked upstairs unaided, went to bed, where he had a good night's sleep, and was up and dressed the next morning, though taking things quietly on a couch upstairs.

How soon he will be able to take the reins again is for the doctors to say, but at the present rate of progress it may be sooner than we feared.

There, my dear alumni, you have the great news item of the School. In comparison with it other news is insignificant, so I shall not write any this time, but shall leave it for another letter.

Faithfully yours,
HENRY C. KITTREDGE

THE SCHOOL IN ACTION

DURING the spring term the obstacle or Commando course that had been constructed near the golf links was put to use. Going over it was a prescribed exercise. Time trials on it left even the best trained competitors gasping and exhausted. For the older boys who were expecting within a few weeks to be inducted into the Army, these trials provided a foretaste of the strenuous efforts that would be required of them and were valuable as a bit of preliminary preparation.

Rifle practice—compulsory now for all members of the Fifth and Sixth Forms—has produced excellent results. Last spring more than a hundred boys—nearly all who took part—qualified as marksmen under the regulations laid down by the War Department; many of them attained the higher grades. In fair weather the range at the Lower Grounds is used; on bad days the range in the basement of the Gymnasium. Mr. Rush is in charge.

The war courses—all voluntary—are much the same as those that were instituted and successfully carried through last year. Mr. Schade's course in Aeronautics offers valuable preliminary instruction for aviation. At the end of the course last year, all the boys in it passed high in the Government test. Mr. Cheney's course in Motor Mechanics, and Mr. Rush's in Piloting, Dead Reckoning and Seamanship are likewise useful contributions to the war effort. Military text books in French and in Spanish are used in the Fifth and Sixth Form classes in those subjects. The boys of the School have organized a war bond drive of their own, to last until the end of the autumn term. In the spring term the purchases by boys of war bonds and war stamps amounted to $3524.

Encouraging progress continues to be made with the work program. The boys now do virtually all the cleaning of the buildings in which they live, besides taking care of their rooms or alcoves and waiting on table in the dining rooms. Outdoor work is also required of them and is cheerfully performed. Each morning the list of boys who are to work in the afternoon instead of engaging in their customary athletic activities is announced at reports. These groups number each about twenty boys; it is expected that by the end of the first four weeks of the autumn term every boy in the School will have participated in the work of one of the groups. Thus far the work has consisted mainly of picking potatoes and harvesting fruits and vegetables. After the crops are in, there will be leaves to be raked, wood to be cut, and, when the ponds are frozen over, hockey rinks to be set up and kept in order. Since the janitor of the Gymnasium has left, Lower School boys now take care of the locker room; the older boys clean and sweep the Hall—(Auditorium to older Alumni). All these labors are performed with surprisingly little grumbling and complaint—a fact which testifies both to the excellent spirit of the boys themselves and to the tactful management by those who are in charge of the Work Program—Mr. Thayer, Mr. Welsh and Mr. Smith.

At this writing the football season is not very far advanced. The Isthmian team defeated the Delphian in the opening game, 14 to 0; in the second game the Old Hundreds beat the Delphians 20 to 0. A brass band that has been rehearsed by Mr. Lefévre and that is led by Amory Houghton performed stirringly between the halves of the first game, but was too diffident to appear at the second. This shyness, unusual in devotees of brass and percussion instruments, is likely to be overcome by the time the next game is played; in fact the band is practising diligently to that purpose. It makes occasional perambulations about the School, always attended by an admiring retinue of small fry.

The Dramatic Club has chosen "The Moon Is Down" as the play to be given on Thanksgiving Day. Mrs. Madeira is directing the production and is conducting rehearsals.

THE SCHOOL'S NEW MASTERS

THREE new men have joined the faculty this year: Mr. James Carroll McDonald, The Rev. J. Boyes Jardine and Mr. Robert Earle Bacon.

Mr. McDonald graduated from a New York high school in 1922, received his A.B. at Harvard in 1926 and three years later his M.A. While in college he sang in his class Glee Club and rowed on the second Freshman one-hundred-and-fifty pound crew. While in the Graduate School he was an assistant in History and later held a position in the office of the Committee on Admissions. He is now teaching History with us and coaching one of the lower Isthmian football teams. He lives in the Middle.

The Rev. J. Boyes Jardine graduated from a Georgia high school, attended the University of Georgia from 1931 to 1933 and later Rollins College; he studied for the ministry at the University of the South from 1939 to 1943, receiving the degree of B.D. In the course of his college career he has played and coached football and is well versed in athletic programmes in both school and college. He taught for a year in a Georgia high school and now has charge of one of the dormitories in the Lower School. He teaches Sacred Studies and coaches the second Isthmian football team.

Mr. Robert E. Bacon graduated from Lafayette College in 1916 and took his Master's Degree at Harvard two years later. He received an appointment to teach English at Trinity College, Hartford, and later taught at both Harvard and Radcliffe. He was called to St. John's College in Annapolis where he stayed for three years. Since then he has taught various subjects at St. George's and Hotchkiss. He and his family will occupy Mr. Sears' house. He is a Delphian and a member of the Choir.

NEW YORK CHURCH SERVICE

THE Annual New York Alumni Church Service was held on the afternoon of Palm Sunday, April 18th, at St. James' Church. The entire body of the church was filled with alumni and friends of the School.

The Rector, Mr. Nash, preached a brief but eloquent sermon, taking as his text the ambitions and jealousies of most of the disciples as contrasted with the devotion of one. It is difficult for us, he said, to realize that ambition, which in America has always been considered a virtue, was viewed as a sin by the Church in the Middle Ages. The abuse of ambition is shown in Freeman's book, "Lee's Lieutenants." Some of the Confederate officers disrupted the smooth operation of the army by their desire to obtain advancement for themselves. The same thing happens in every army and in civilian organizations as well. It is easy, however, for us as spectators to criticize. If we see ourselves not as spectators but as actors, we shall feel not scorn but sympathy, and will realize the truth of the saying: "There, but for the Grace of God, go I." Only he who is completely devoted can be trusted to serve the cause to its end.

The Rt. Rev. John T. Dallas, Bishop of New Hampshire, participated in the service and a splendid choir sang the school anthem and the familiar hymns, "Love Divine," "Saviour, Source of Every Blessing," and "Saviour, Again to Thy Dear Name We Raise."

WILLIAM FELLOWES MORGAN

THE death of William Fellowes Morgan, '76, on May 2nd removed from St. Paul's one of her most devoted sons, from the Alumni Association one of its most enthusiastic members and from the community in which he lived, New York City, one of its most public-spirited citizens. Few men have filled with honor so many civic positions, or have occupied so many places in church and state, as Fellowes Morgan.

Born on Staten Island, N. Y., September 24, 1860, he entered St. Paul's in 1871, remaining there but one year when, for family reasons, he was removed and sent to Rugby, England. He was graduated from Columbia University in 1880, and at once entered upon a business career in which he became prominent. He was a pioneer in the cold storage industry and continued to be a leader in it until his death. He was chairman of the Merchants Refrigerating Company. He occupied a dominating position in the marketing field, and had many other business interests. He was a trustee of the Bank for Savings, a director of the Chemical Bank and Trust Company, and of the Savannah Sugar Refining Company. Prominent in so many business organizations and at the same time being a leader in church and educational affairs, one wonders how he could give time to the lighter side of life, to his friends, his country clubs, and to his home. But he did it, and his home life was ideal.

In 1885 he married Miss Emma Leavitt, and for more than fifty years their family life was a beautiful one, and his hospitable home was always open to his many friends. He is survived by Mrs. Morgan, by a son, William Fellowes Morgan, '06, and by two daughters, Mrs. David Marvin Goodrich and Mrs. Cleveland E. Dodge.

It would take too much space even to mention the positions filled by this untiring man, but it was in such positions as trustee of the General Theological Seminary and of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, Governor of the Union Club, and such organizations, that his work was much appreciated.

His devotion to St. Paul's was outstanding throughout his life; and this is all the more remarkable because of his short residence at the School. But his family had long known Dr. Coit, and he seemed to have come under the influence of the First Rector more intimately than most boys who resided longer at the School. He belonged to that generation of boys who were at the School in the '70's—a generation which produced a remarkably high type of American citizen. In that decade Dr. Coit was in his prime; his personal influence, spiritual and otherwise, was a vital part of the life; no boy could shun it, and few failed to profit by it. Fellowes Morgan was an outstanding example of this type, embodying, as he did, many of the ideals of the First Rector, so far as his place in life went.

What he was to the business life of New York, he was in a more intimate degree to the Alumni Association of St. Paul's. Gifted with a sense of humour and an easy manner, he was sought after to preside at alumni gatherings. For years he was a member of our Standing Committee, and latterly its chairman from 1922 to 1934. His graceful and efficient administration is an inspiration to those who have to succeed him.

In business, he was a leader; in civic affairs, an inspiration; and in Church matters, his judgment was sought. By instinct a public-spirited citizen, his life was one of service.

MALCOLM K. GORDON, '87.

ANNIVERSARY 1943

RESTRICTIONS on transportation and the fact that so many Alumni are in the armed services greatly reduced the number of our Anniversary visitors. Those who came were all the more welcome. Ernest H. Noyes, of the Form of 1893, was the sole representative of the fifty-year class. Five members of the Form of 1918 appeared for some part of the celebration.

The track meet, held on Friday afternoon under most favorable weather conditions, was well attended and interesting. The most notable event was the pole vault, in which William G. Lawrence, O.H., who had broken the previous school record the week before in the meet with Manchester High School, excelled his own best performance and thus established a new school record of 11 feet  $3\frac{3}{8}$  inches. The record for the one hundred yards dash, 10 seconds, held by J. H. Stewart since 1909, had been tied by George H. Howard, D., in the meet with Manchester and might have been tied by him again had he not had the misfortune to break his ankle in the high jump the day before. The competition among the three clubs was extremely close, and the outcome was decided only by the relay race, which the Delphians won. The final standing in points was as follows: Delphians 68, Old Hundreds 63, Isthmians  $57\frac{1}{2}$ .

On Friday evening in the Hall the Glee Club, under the direction of Mr.

Lefévre, gave a delightful entertainment entitled "The Old Refrain." The Dramatic Club under the direction of Mr. Madeira contributed its assistance in setting the stage to represent a Vienna café; the performers were in costume and represented singers and dancers of various nationalities. To Mrs. Madeira, Mrs. Oates, E. W. Baird and Charles Loveland much praise is due for the artistic design, picturesque costumes, and beautiful color and light effects. James C. Fargo, as the maître d'hotel who introduced the singers and dancers, played his part with appropriate gusto; T. N. Troxell, N. E. Mack, W. H. Floyd, A. A. Somerville, E. K. MacColl and L. W. Pemberton sang respectively Irish, Italian, North Carolina, Welsh, English, and Hawaiian songs; James Hickox, Julian Leonard, A. M. Macy and A. A. Somerville rendered negro spirituals appealingly; choruses sang hunting songs and Mexican, Spanish and Russian songs; L. S. Gilmour gave an exhibition of magic with professional skill.

Saturday, Race Day, offered a variety of entertainment. In the morning the School baseball nine, organized after the Club series had ended, played the Manchester High School team, and after having at one time been in the lead 9 to 1 was fortunate to win by a score of 12 to 10. It was no small triumph as the visitors were rated the best high school team in New Hampshire. The dinner that followed was a memorable meal, since for the first time during the term roast beef was served in all three dining halls. There was no parade of Alumni preceded by a brass band after dinner. Although the Halcyon banner was displayed above the road in front of the Middle as usual, neither marching graduates nor motor trucks filled with oarsmen passed under it. The crews walked to the junction of the Shattuck road and the Hopkinton highway and there took horse-drawn barges to Long Pond. Later these barges returned to the corner to transport the ladies and Alumni. The boys and masters walked. Not since the 1880's has there been another Race Day which required shanks' mare to be put to such severe use by so many people. The afternoon was cool and pleasant, with a fresh breeze blowing; and since no vehicles were on the road to throw up lingering clouds of dust the primitive method of locomotion that was compulsory caused no serious hardship. There were only five crew races at Long Pond; three lower crew races—distinct from the Lower School races—had been rowed the preceding Wednesday on the School pond; two of them had been won by the Shattucks. At three-thirty the Fifth Crew race, between four-oared crews, was started. It was a close race and was won by the Halcyons. The four other races, all eight-oared, were won by the Shattucks.

By six o'clock the spectators were assembled round the flagpole waiting for the crews to arrive. The Halcyon barge was the first to appear, with the captain elect, M. S. Wyeth, sitting with the retiring captain, Avery Rockefeller, on the front seat. Soon came the Shattucks, with their new captain, Robert B. O'Connor, and their retiring captain, H. L. Dillon, seated side by side. The Shattuck flag and oar were hauled to the top of the flagpole; the Shattuck crews sang and cheered their rivals, the coaches and themselves, according to custom; then S. F. Rulon-Miller introduced Miss Straw of Manchester, who presented the prizes, and Edgar

W. Baird, '16, of Philadelphia, who made a most felicitous little speech. Charles K. White was the initial recipient of the Championship Belt for Boxing, recently presented to the School by Charles D. Hart, '88. The final award was that of the Malcolm Kenneth Gordon Medal for the best all-round athlete; Mr. Baird expressed the universal regret that Mr. Gordon was not on hand to present it in person, and he then read the citation describing the accomplishments of the winner, who proved—to no one's great surprise—to be Ezekiel A. Straw, the brother of the young lady from Manchester.

This year, as most of the Alumni know, rowing was not allowed on Long Pond until two weeks before Race Day; and it didn't look as if it would be allowed at all. The School thanks the Merrimack County Fish and Game Association for having revived the demand to open Long Pond, after practically all hope had been abandoned; and particular thanks are due to Robert Potter, Assistant Business Manager of the School, who very ably conducted negotiations with the Board of Aldermen (of which he is a member) to resume boating and fishing on Long Pond, thus overruling a decision to prohibit it which had previously been made by the Concord City Water Board.

On Saturday evening the members of the Fifth and Sixth Forms and their guests had a dance; for the rest of the School a movie, "Me and My Gal," was shown in the Hall.

Sunday, Memorial Day, was another fine day. The Rector preached the sermon; the choir sang the anthem, "Oh Pray for the Peace of Jerusalem," with E. K. MacColl as soloist. Immediately after the Chapel service, all went to the Library terrace where the Memorial Day exercises were held. After offering a prayer, Mr. Nash read the names of the St. Paul's boys who died in the Spanish War and the First World War and who have died in the present war. Then Henry Sprague, the youngest boy in the School, hung the wreath on the monument; Thomas A. Lanahan, the president of the Sixth Form, read the Gettysburg Address; Amory Houghton sounded taps, and the flag was raised from half-mast. The exercises closed with the singing of "America."

At the Alumni Luncheon in the Upper School dining room Mr. Nash presided. He introduced as the first speaker the president of the Sixth Form, Thomas A. Lanahan, whose address was extraordinarily fine. Next Mr. Nash read the citation for gallantry accompanying the award of the Navy Cross to Lieutenant (now Captain) Paul Moore, '37, of the Marines, who had been seriously wounded on Guadalcanal; he then called on him. Lieutenant Moore gave a brief but graphic description of some of the hardships that the men had suffered on Guadalcanal; he devoted most of his speech to comment on the enlisted men with whom he had served. One night, before an attack, lying on the same poncho in the front line with a sergeant who had been in the Marines for nine years, he began to tell him about St. Paul's School. The sergeant listened with interest to the description of the rowing on Long Pond, and in return described boat races of marine crews in which he had taken part. Then the sergeant asked further questions about life at St. Paul's and was given a quite complete and detailed account of it. At the end the sergeant said, "Isn't it wonderful that there are such schools in America! And that there are boys who are privileged to go to them!" Lieutenant Moore described the attitude of the men towards religion as reverent and reiterated the often heard saying that there were no atheists among the troops on Guadalcanal. He told of the large attendance every Sunday morning at divine service, and described particularly a mass celebrated by a Catholic priest in the jungle and attended by five hundred men, all of them dirty and many of them blood-stained; they all knelt with their rifles over their shoulders, facing the only clean things on the island, the white cloth of the altar and the white vestments of the priest.

Mr. Reeve Schley spoke briefly and wittily on behalf of the Trustees. Mr. Frank Knox, the Secretary of the Navy, followed. He had attended the Memorial exercises at the Library and had been struck by the reading of the names—particularly those of Alumni who had died in the Spanish War and with whom he had served. He had himself helped to bury Hamilton Fish in a grave with nine others; he had been standing next to Theodore Miller when he was struck by the bullet that caused his death. He spoke feelingly of the contribution that this School and its Alumni had made and were making to the war.

Mr. Nash closed the exercises with a moving little speech in which he told of an anonymous gift that had just been received in memory of Lieutenant Robert Hill Cox, '37, who had been killed while fighting with the British Army in Tunisia.

ARTHUR S. PIER, '90

ANNUAL ALUMNI MEETING

THE Annual Meeting of the Alumni Association was held in the Reading Room of the new School House, on Saturday, May 29th, and was called to order by President Callaway. Only twenty-five persons attended, as the competition of an S. P. S.-Manchester High School Baseball Game at the Lower Grounds took away the majority of our customers.

Mr. Nash, after the customary prayer, made a brief address of welcome, and told us that in spite of all the difficulties imposed by war, food-rationing, travel, delivery restrictions, etc., the School had had a very good year and had ended with a surplus.

Most of the routine reports were omitted and voted to be accepted as printed. They are herewith appended.

The Alumni Fund Report is so good for this difficult year that it deserves to be printed in full elsewhere, and this is being done.

A motion, offered by Dr. Neergaard and unanimously carried, recorded a vote of thanks to the officers of the Association, to the chairmen and members of the various alumni committees, such as Hockey, Alumni Horae and Alumni Fund, and to the Form Agents, for their efforts and interest which have contributed so much to the successful results of the Alumni Association for the past year.

Allen P. Chase, Business Manager of the School for the past five years, who is in a large measure responsible for the excellent operating report of the School, was elected an Honorary Member of the Alumni Association.

After the election of the new Standing Committee, which involved only two changes, there being no further business, the meeting was adjourned.

EDWARD D. TOLAND, Secretary and Clerk

THE PRESIDENT'S REPORT

UNFORTUNATELY for those who attend these annual meetings, the Constitution and By-Laws provide that "The President shall preside at all meetings and shall make a report at the annual meeting respecting the state and progress of the Association." However, luckily for you today, the long baseball game, which our S.P.S. team has just won, has cut into the period for our meeting, so my report will necessarily be brief—and brings you good news of your Association.

In spite of the heavy demands upon our time and the distractions from normal interests the war conditions have imposed upon all alumni, their continued thought and keen interest in the affairs of St. Paul's is evidenced by the successful year through which the Association has just passed.

The chairmen and members of our various committees, such as the Alumni Fund, Alumni Horae, New York Hockey Game, New York Church Service, of which respectively Laurence White, Stuart Preston, Fellows Morgan, Jr., and Arthur Neergaard were chairmen, and the largely attended dinners and interesting meetings of the Standing Committee and Form Agents, the successful alumni dinners and meetings in Philadelphia and Boston,—which were run respectively by Fred Drayton, Dr. Toland, E. B. Smith, Jr., and Fred Church—all these evidenced the loyalty of the alumni to their school.

The financial reports made to you today show improved financial results which were hardly to be expected.

The Hockey Committee through our Treasurer, Martin Keogh, Jr., turned over to the Boys' Camp a check for over a thousand dollars, approximately twice the contribution made the previous year.

Contributions to the 1943 Alumni Fund will exceed those of any year since 1931.

The expense of operating the Association given in the Treasurer's report for 1943 shows a decrease in operating expenses over the previous year.

We all recognize and appreciate the untiring efforts and faithful interest, and extend our thanks to Clarence West, our Executive Secretary, and Miss Olive Fisher of the New York alumni office, and also to Miss Alice King at the alumni office at the School.

It has been the privilege of your President to attend during the past year all the meetings of the Board of Trustees, which have been so fully attended by the Trustees. They have proved stimulating to me and given evidence of the sound foundation for the continued success and future of St. Paul's.

Last, but not least, the alumni all find in our Rector sympathetic and helpful cooperation and a leadership in School affairs which has given the alumni confidence in the future of the School. This has contributed in no small part to the successful year of the Alumni Association.

LAST NIGHT

IT HAS been the privilege of many Old Boys to attend the Last Night exercises of their sons at St. Paul's School, but I wonder if at any time in these pages there has been recorded not only the details of the activities during this period but also the reminiscences that come to a parent under these circumstances.

Thirty-nine years ago it was my privilege to be one of the graduating group and to receive my diploma and copy of the New Testament, then written in Latin. While listening to the various scholastic awards, it was not inappropriate, I think, to let one's mind drift into reminiscences and try to visualize again the feelings that entered one's heart at that time. Here I was in the same study, the same building, and the only changes were that the platform and master's desk were on the opposite side of the room. Dr. Milnor Coit was then the acting head of the School. His admonitions and remarks of what St. Paul's would mean to us all were, naturally, not appreciated at the moment but, as the years have passed, I realize increasingly that the influence and life of the School leave their mark through the rest of one's days.

But this, possibly, is not the place for reminiscences but rather a narrative of what took place this past June.

In spite of the difficulties of travel due to war conditions, there was a good attendance. Many arrived on the evening of Thursday, the eighth of June and others on Friday morning. Prior to the graduation exercises a most elaborate and delicious supper was served by the Rector and Mrs. Nash, at the conclusion of which we adjourned to the study hall. Mr. Nash, in his inimitable, sparkling manner, distributed the various prizes and was ably assisted by the Vice-rectors, Mr. Kittredge and Mr. Monie. The scholastic standing of the graduating form was one of the highest in the history of St. Paul's. Fourteen received cum laude, thirteen magna cum laude, and seven summa cum laude in a graduating form of eighty-seven, of whom twenty-four were sons of alumni.

The Rector then addressed the School. It is regrettable that Mr. Nash, who always speaks so ably and to the point, rarely keeps notes, which is indeed a misfortune; consequently, I am unable to record here his message.

The Rector's address was followed by an address by William C. Evarts, '05, whose son was in the graduating form. His text stressed the great responsibilities that would suddenly be placed upon the members of the form in the present war; however, he pointed out that, while the war and its responsibilities were uppermost in our minds today, it should not be considered as "the sole pattern under which the years of your life as a whole will be lived." Mr. Evarts went on to say: "It seems to me that there is no more important subject to which we can direct our attention on this important night than the subject of being a real person, through every kind of wind and weather. I mean by this a real guy; not a "regular guy" and not a "swell guy," not even a "good guy" and certainly not a "tough guy," but what, with the proper tone and the proper inflection, one can honestly call a "real guy." Mr. Evarts then quoted from the Fifteenth Psalm, called by some the "gentleman's Psalm," which reads as follows: "He that doeth the thing which is right and speaketh the truth from his heart," who "hath used no deceit in his tongue nor done evil to his neighbor," who "setteth not by himself but is lowly in his own eyes," who, when he has made a promise to "his neighbor, disappointeth him not though it were to his own hindrance." "He who doeth these things," said the Psalmist, "shall never fall."

At the close of the exercises we adjourned to the lovely Chapel. No Old Boy can enter its portals without an up-surge of the finest thoughts that are in him. The music at the service included the singing of the Last Night Hymn and a rendition of Beethoven's Hallelujah Chorus from "The Mount of Olives" by the Choir, accompanied by Mr. Lefévre at the organ. The usual march-out was followed by the entire school's shaking hands with the graduating Sixth Form in the School Study. Later the entire school outside the Study sang "Salve, Mater" accompanied by the School Band.

And so, in a few hours, the Sixth Formers become Old Boys and go out into a world of chaos and strife. May the words of the Rector and Mr. Evarts, in addition to their life at St. Paul's, make the difficult situations that they may face, not only in this war but in future life, a little bit easier.

1943 ALUMNI FUND REPORT

CONTRIBUTIONS to this year's Alumni Fund have reached the sum of $19,324.64. This figure not only substantially exceeds the final figure of last year's Fund, $14,030.80, but it exceeds the amount received in any year since 1931. The number of contributors this year is almost exactly the same as last year. These results are especially impressive because nearly one-third of the School's alumni are in active war service and scattered all over the world.

We were most fortunate in receiving several large contributions, including two of $1,000, two of $500, and many others from $50 to $250. These substantial gifts were obtained only by the aggressive and conscientious work of certain Form Agents.

The Form of 1918, under the leadership of Arthur W. Bingham, Jr., raised $2,271.64 as its Twenty-fifth Anniversary Gift to the School.

The contribution of the Form of 1927 was given in memory of their formate, Grant Barney Schley, 2d, who was killed in the service of his country. The contribution of the Form of 1893 included gifts in memory of Joseph S. Wheelwright and George Clymer Brooke, and the contribution of the Form of 1939 included a gift in memory of Edward Orrick McDonnell, reported missing in action.

The tabulation below indicates those Form Agents who did exceptionally well, both in percentage of contributors and in the amount raised. As your Chairman for 1943, I want to take this opportunity of thanking all the Form Agents whose enthusiasm and energy have made this result possible. I particularly want to express my appreciation for the efficiency of the School office in New York, for both Mr. West and Miss Fisher have been of great assistance.

E. LAURENCE WHITE, '03, Chairman

ANNUAL NEW YORK HOCKEY GAME

The School Hockey Team will play the Kent School Team at Madison Square Garden on Thursday, December 16th at 3:30 p.m. The welcome innovation of playing a preparatory school team at the Garden instead of the Harvard, Princeton or Yale freshman team is due to the fact that hockey has been discontinued at these colleges for the duration. As in previous years, the entire proceeds of the game will be devoted to the St. Paul's School Camp for Boys.

A LETTER FROM AUSTRALIA

LAST summer the Rector received an unusually interesting letter from Lt. Comdr. Samuel E. Morison, USNR, of the Form of 1903. Commander Morison, the noted historian, was commissioned in May, 1942, while serving as Jonathan Trumbull Professor of American History at Harvard. He has been appointed by the Secretary of the Navy to write a history of the United States Navy. During the summer of 1942, he witnessed convoy and anti-submarine activities in the Atlantic and participated in the invasion of North Africa in November, 1942. His letter follows:

Queensland Club, Brisbane, June 14, 1943.

Dear Norman:

I don't know whether you have heard that there are two S.P.S. Admirals somewhere in the Pacific—Rear Admiral T. S. ("Ping") Wilkinson, 1905, and Vice Admiral A. S. ("Chips") Carpenter, 1901. Both of them have greatly facilitated my getting around in these parts, and "Chips" handed over to me the latest Alumni Horae, which suggested that I write to you. For it was most gratifying to find that S.P.S. was keeping mens sana in mundo insano, preparing young men to play their part in the emergency, clinging to the wisdom of the past, as exemplified by the Christian religion and the classics, and looking forward to a controlling influence of sanity and vision in the future. I have no doubt whatever of the victorious outcome of the war, but the possibility of a revival of isolationism in every victorious country is a very real danger. Those of us in the armed forces can't do anything about it at present; but in my opinion the leaders at home can best contribute to a real winning of the war—achieving a lasting peace—by taking every opportunity to point out the certain failure of a nationally selfish policy after the war is over.

My travels in the Pacific have taken me to sundry places where St. Paul's boys have already given their lives, as the latest Horae reminds me. At Guadalcanal I marvelled at the fortitude that kept men fighting after repeated nightly bombings from the air and from hostile ships. At Tulagi and Gavutu I saw the caves from which the trapped enemy poured out a murderous fire. Savo Island, rising from the calm Pacific like a blue coxcomb, is a monument to one of the most glorious chapters in our naval history. It is a curious experience, after my earlier work, to be writing the history of events within a year of their occurrence; and although the lack of perspective is constantly felt, there is a compensating advantage in talking with the people who have been in action and clearing up through conversation obscure or contradictory matters in the official reports.

Australia is making a tremendous war effort. Vast as that country is, her population is not much more than that of greater New York; yet she has supported a formidable expeditionary force since 1939, and has mobilized practically her entire manpower. There are still strikes, to be sure, but that is one of the prices one has to pay for freedom. The Australians greatly appreciate the aid we have sent to their country, and treat our men with kindness and hospitality. I have spent a month here, and have seen only a small part of the country.

By the time you receive this letter I shall probably be on my way home, to settle down and write for a bit.

With fervent prayers "for the Peace of Jerusalem," I am

Ever sincerely yours,

Sam E. Morison.

Soon after the above letter was written, Commander Morison returned to the States and spent the summer in Maine. In a letter received from him in August regarding his further experiences in the South Pacific, he wrote that he went three times "up the slot" in the Solomon Islands aboard a light cruiser, and that the last time our Navy forces encountered and sunk an enemy task force. This was the action of July 13th, the Battle of Kolombangara.

RANKING ALUMNI IN WAR SERVICE

ARTHUR SCHUYLER CARPENDER, '01, in July, 1942, was made Commanding Officer, Naval Forces, Southwest Pacific, with the rank of Vice Admiral while in that duty. After graduation from the Naval Academy, he served on various ships until August, 1914, when he reported for duty in the Office of Naval Militia. During World War I he was Commanding Officer of the U.S.S. Fanning and was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious service in that duty and especially for an engagement on November 17, 1917, with the German submarine U-58, as a result of which the submarine was forced to come to the surface and surrender. For the same service he was cited by the British Government, and was awarded the British Distinguished Service Order. In September, 1939, he assumed command of Destroyer Squadron 32; in November, 1940, he was attached to the Bureau of Navigation; and in December 1941 he assumed command of Destroyers, Atlantic Fleet. He has been decorated with the Mexican Service Medal, the Victory Medal, Escort Clasp, and the American Defense Service Medal, Fleet Clasp, as well as the Distinguished Service Medal and the British Distinguished Service Order.

THEODORE STARK WILKINSON, '05, was promoted to the rank of Rear Admiral on June 22, 1942 to rank from April 21, 1942, and his most recent appointment has been as Commander, Amphibious Force, South Pacific. He was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1909. In 1913 he was attached to the U.S.S. Florida and awarded the Medal of Honor for distinguished conduct in battle in the engagements of Vera Cruz, April 21 and 22, 1914. During World War I he was attached to the Bureau of Ordnance, and for his service was awarded a special letter of commendation. He became Secretary of the General Board in 1931. While on that station he was assigned to additional duty in connection with the Limitation of Armaments negotiations at Geneva and in London. In June, 1939, he reported for duty as Chief of Staff and Aide, Commander Scouting Force. In 1941 he had command of the U.S.S. Mississippi until September when he reported as Director of Naval Intelligence. In August, 1942, he was ordered to duty afloat. After serving as Deputy Commander, South Pacific Force and Area, he was transferred to his present duty. In addition to the Medal of Honor, Rear Admiral Wilkinson has the Mexican Service Medal, U.S.S. Florida, Navy Expeditionary Medal, ashore at Vera Cruz, 1914, the Victory Medal, American Defense Service Medal, Fleet Clasp, and the Asiatic-Pacific Area Campaign Medal.

CRESWELL GARLINGTON, '06, was appointed Brigadier General, United States Army, in July, 1942, and is now the Commanding General of the Engineer Replacement Training Center, at Fort Leonard Wood, Missouri. After graduating from the United States Military Academy in 1910, and being commissioned 2nd Lieutenant in the Corps of Engineers, he graduated from the Army Engineer

School in 1912. Thereafter, he was assigned to the Fortification Division of the Panama Canal, of which he became Chief in 1916; he was instructor at the U. S. M. A. for a year, and was on the General Staff of the 77th Division (New York City Division) at Camp Upton, New York. During World War I he served in France for a year and a half. In the period between the two wars his activities included a course at the Ecole Superieure de Guerre in Paris; "Distinguished Graduate" Command and General Staff School; Command of the 8th Engineer Battalion; Graduate Army War College; and War Department General Staff from 1928 to 1932. In addition there were the usual and various military assignments. He has been decorated with the Distinguished Service Cross, the Purple Heart, and the Order of the Crown, Belgium. His sons, Creswell Garlington, Jr., '40, now in the Army, and Henry F. Garlington, '41, both attended St. Paul's.

ARTHUR R. HARRIS, '10, was promoted to the rank of Brigadier General (temporary) in March, 1943, at that time and still Military Attache to Mexico City. After graduating from the U.S.M.A. and being commissioned a second lieutenant of Field Artillery in 1914, he served several assignments in Texas with the Field Artillery, and in Arkansas as Aide to Major General Sturgis. In this latter capacity he sailed for France in July, 1917. While overseas he served in many capacities both during and after the war, and did not return to this country until August, 1920. In the ensuing years he took many courses and gave many in various military schools. He served for four years as Military Attache at San Jose, Costa Rica. In 1939 he was placed in charge of the Latin American Section of the Military Intelligence Division of the War Department General Staff, Washington, D. C. He went on a mission to the Latin American countries between July and September, 1940, and then was ordered to Washington in charge of the Military Attache and Foreign Liaison Section of the Military Intelligence Division, War Department General Staff. In 1940 he was decorated with the Order of Merit by the Dominican Republic.

THE ROLL OF HONOR

KENNETH LAURENCE OGLE, of the Form of 1907, Lieutenant Colonel, A.U.S., died in Washington, May 6, 1943.

Kenneth Ogle, after spending one year, 1905-1906, at S.P.S., went to Princeton. In the First World War, he went to Officers' Training Camp and then served over 18 months in the A.E.F. He took part in the following operations: Lunéville sector; Baccarat sector; Champagne-Marne offensive; Marne-Aisne offensive; St. Mihiel offensive, as well as in minor operations on the Woevre and in operations west of the Meuse. He was wounded once and received a Divisional citation and the Croix de Guerre. He left the Army in May, 1919, a Captain in the 165th Infantry, 42d Division.

From 1919 until 1942, Ogle lived in Indianapolis, engaged in the brokerage business. To quote an editorial which appeared in the Indianapolis News at the time of his death: "He was one of a small group of farsighted men who saw the global war to come and he worked tirelessly as an evangelist in the cause of American participation on Britain's side. It was a tribute to his character and his zeal that he scorned to remain a civilian while the United States armed itself. Even though he had passed the fifty-year mark, he sought and gained entry into the army. His friends understood and respected the depth of his feeling and they knew quite well his passion for action overseas. Kenneth Ogle always knew which side he was on and he was willing to fight for his beliefs."

In March, 1942, Ogle reentered the Army as Major in an M.P. Battalion. He was stationed successively at Fort Harrison, Indiana, at Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, and, finally, at Fort Ord, California, where he was in command of an M.P. Battalion. While at Fort Ord, he was made a Lieutenant Colonel. His battalion was at Oakland expecting orders and Ogle himself had gone to Washington for a few days when his death occurred.

In May, 1919, Ogle had married Vera Strickland of Coronado, California, who survives him with three children, a daughter, Virginia Ogle, now working at the Naval Air Station in Coronado, and twin sons, Kenneth L. Ogle, Jr., who, as a bomber pilot in Africa, completed 50 missions, was decorated with the Air Medal, the D.F.C., and several Oak Leaf Clusters, and who is now stationed at Kelly Field, Texas, and William Ogle, with the Armored Infantry, at present stationed at Fort Benning, Georgia.

GOUVERNEUR MORRIS CARNOCHAN, of the Form of 1910, Lieutenant Commander, U.S.N.R., was killed in the crash of a plane, while on active duty in South America, October 12, 1943.

Commander Carnochan had received his commission in the autumn of 1942. He was attached to the Naval Air Force and had been stationed at Norfolk, Va. He was killed in the line of duty at the age of 51, while on some mission in South America, the nature of which, as well as the place of the accident which caused his death, has not yet been reported by the Navy Department.

In the First World War also, Carnochan had served in the Naval Air Corps, as Chief Quartermaster and Ensign Student Officer, and then as Instructor in Aerial Navigation. He was commissioned Ensign, September 7, 1918. He was under flight instruction from December 6, 1918 to March 6, 1919, as of which later date he was transferred to inactive duty status.

Carnochan was at S.P.S. six years, from 1904-1910. As a Sixth Former, he was goal of the Delphian hockey team in a club series made memorable by the already brilliant playing of H.A.H. Baker, who was on the Isthmian team. He was a member of the Concordian Literary Society, took part in dramatics and belonged to the Mandolin Club and the Banjo Club. From S.P.S., he went to Harvard, where he took his degree in 1914.

Prior to his second service in the Navy, Carnochan was a member of the firm of Butler, Herrick and Marshall, on the New York Stock Exchange. He was a former president of the Intercollegiate Polo Association, and a former treasurer of the United States Polo Association.

Carnochan is survived by his widow, Sibyll Bliss Carnochan; by a daughter, Mrs. Lauriston L. Scaife, whose husband, the Reverend L. L. Scaife, was a master at S.P.S. in 1937-38; by two sons, Corporal Gouverneur Morris Carnochan, Jr., USA, and Walter Bliss Carnochan, who is preparing to enter the School in 1944; and by a brother, Frederic G. Carnochan, '09.

ROBERT CRESSWELL, of the Form of 1915, Lieutenant Colonel, A.U.S., died of a streptococcus infection on September 12, 1943, in a military hospital in England while on duty with the Office of Strategic Services.

Bob Cresswell was born in Philadelphia on May 29, 1897. One of the ablest scholars in his class, which he entered in Third Form year, he became an assistant editor and, in his Sixth Form year, Associate Head Editor, of the Horae. His contributions to it were of marked literary excellence. His vice-presidency of the Concordian Literary Society was an additional bond in his already deep friendship with Willard Scudder, '85, who was a master at the School from 1893 to 1936; and in later years in the conception and establishment of the Willard Scudder Memorial he assumed a major role.

His college career at Princeton—where his journalistic ability was soon recognized in his election, while still a freshman, to the staff of the Daily Princetonian—was interrupted by the first World War. Entering the first Officers' Training Camp at Fort Niagara in the spring of his sophomore year, he was commissioned a First Lieutenant of Field Artillery in August 1917. He was promoted to Captain in March 1918, and served overseas with the 79th Division in the Meuse-Argonne offensive. In 1919 he acted as Executive Officer of the Baltic Mission of the American Relief Administration. Thereafter he returned to Princeton, to graduate, a member of Phi Beta Kappa, in 1920. In that year he was Chairman of the Daily Princetonian.

The gift which he had for journalism enabled him to secure in 1922 a position as a reporter for the New York Herald-Tribune, on which he served successively in various editorial and administrative capacities until 1932, when he was elected a director and treasurer of that paper. These offices he held until 1940. In 1941 he headed a corporation which purchased the Philadelphia Evening Ledger, of which he became president and publisher. In March, 1943, he re-entered the armed forces and shortly thereafter was sent to London on a special mission.

Although he held numerous positions of responsibility in the fields of business and journalism, his loyalty to school and college was steadfast and found expression in generous gifts of his time and professional talents to direction of the affairs of the Alumni Horae, the Princeton University Press and the Princeton Alumni Weekly.

He is survived by his mother and by two sons, Robert Cresswell, Jr., '40, and Henry Cresswell, '43, who, following the tradition of their father, are in the service of their country.

CARL RUMSEY HEUSSY, of the Form of 1922, Lieutenant (j.g.) U.S.C.G.R., died April 6, 1943, at Port Angeles, Washington, of injuries received the day before in the crash of a Coast Guard patrol plane.

Carl Heussy, who came to S.P.S. in 1917 and spent five years there, was a native and a citizen of Seattle. His family had been connected with the city and region surrounding it from the time they were first settled, for his grandfather, Captain John W. Rumsey, was one of the earliest pioneers, and Dr. William C. Heussy, his father, practiced medicine in Seattle for forty years. Carl Heussy himself was a lawyer. After taking his A.B. degree at Harvard in 1926, he went back to Seattle to live. He graduated from the University of Washington Law School in 1930, served for several years as deputy prosecutor in the district attorney's office, and in 1936 began private practice.

Successful in his profession, Heussy also had numerous other interests. He had been managing secretary of the Automobile Dealers' Association and of the Washington Automotive Trade Association since 1931. He had been a trustee of the Seattle Tennis Club. He served on the board of trustees of the Municipal League and on the legislative committee of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce. He was a member of the Washington State Bar Association, of the American Bar Association, of Phi Delta Phi, an honorary legal fraternity, and of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion. He was one of the leaders of the Young Republican League and he was a communicant of St. Mark's Episcopal parish.

Heussy interrupted this career of civic usefulness to take part in the defense of the country which he, like his father and grandfather before him, had helped to develop. He began active service in the Coast Guard, June 25, 1942, and was stationed at Port Angeles, Washington, where his duties were chiefly those of communications officer at the air-base. There, possibly remembering his days at S.P.S., where as a Sixth Former he played on the second Isthmian foot-ball team and was captain of the third Halcyon crew, he helped to organize a schedule of athletics for men in the armed forces. He served as manager of one team, called the Port Angeles Commandos, and he started a city basket-ball league providing competition between six service teams and two civilian teams. Heussy loved his work in the Coast Guard, and frequently expressed his desire to remain in the service after the war.

On April 5, 1943, in heavy fog, a patrol plane in which Heussy and three other Coast Guard officers were flying, crashed into the side of Blyn Mountain, not far from Port Angeles, snapped off several large second growth firs, catapulted and landed at the bottom of a small gulch. Two of the men were killed instantly. A rescue party summoned by inhabitants of the town of Blyn, who had heard the impact of the plane on the mountain side, found Heussy and one other man still alive, gave them first aid and carried them out over rough country, through thick undergrowth, on stretchers made at the scene of the crash, to a road. Thence an ambulance took them to the Port Angeles hospital, where late that night both men died. Heussy was only thirty-seven years old, but he was already well known in his community as an enthusiastic sportsman, as an able lawyer and as a public-spirited, effective citizen.

In 1927, Heussy had married Miss Loyal Lamont, who survives him with two sons, Peter Lamont Heussy and William Charles Heussy. He is also survived by his mother, Mrs. William C. Heussy and by his sister, Mrs. Breck MacAlister.

JOHN HIGH NOYES, of the Form of 1922, Lieutenant U.S.N.R., was killed November 28, 1942, at Boston, Massachusetts, in the Cocoanut Grove fire.

Jack Noyes entered S.P.S. in the Third Form in 1918. He played on two Delphian foot-ball teams, as a substitute in 1920, and as full-back in 1921. He rowed on the second Shattuck crew in 1922. From S.P.S. he went to the Sheffield Scientific School at Yale, where he rowed on the Class 150-pound crew in his Sophomore year, and the following autumn was on the Varsity crew squad. He left Yale in the middle of his Senior year without graduating, and went into manufacturing; first for about two years with the Sangamo Electric Company at Springfield, Illinois, when he was employed in nearly every department of the factory; then for another two years, mostly in the sales department, with the Griffin Wheel Company in Chicago. From December, 1930, until shortly after Pearl Harbor, he was Production and Development Manager of the Felt and Tarrant Manufacturing Company of Chicago.

After Pearl Harbor, Noyes volunteered for service in the Navy and, while waiting for his appointment, joined the Civil Air Patrol with his own plane, a Stinson-Voyageur. He spent several months near Great Lakes and Fort Sheridan, north of Chicago, acting as a target for Anti-Aircraft aim practice. He then volunteered for coastal service with the C.A.P., and was sent to Pascagoula Airport near Mobile, Alabama. For a few weeks, he patrolled a section of the Gulf Coast.

On August 15, 1942, Noyes was commissioned Lieutenant, Senior Grade, U.S.N.R. On September 1, he went to the Naval Training School at Cornell for Indoctrination and Navigation. At the end of September he was detached to the Naval Training School at Harvard for further instruction in Communications. He and his wife rented a small apartment near Harvard Square. He was finishing his course, and in a month or so was expecting to go to sea, when they were both killed in the Cocoanut Grove fire.

Noyes was the son of Ernest High Noyes, of the Form of 1893, who survives him as does his mother (before her marriage Ellen Keats Crutcher of Louisville, Kentucky). He and his wife, the former Dorothea Felt, leave two sons, John High Noyes, Jr., of the Second Form, and Nicholas Noyes, who is preparing to enter the School in 1945.

GRANT BARNEY SCHLEY, 2d, of the Form of 1927, First Lieutenant, U. S. Army Air Forces, Air Transport Command, Ferrying Division, was killed in the line of duty April 28, 1943, near Exeter, California, as the result of an airplane accident on a ferrying mission.

Grant Barney Schley, the son of the late Chaloner B. Schley, 1896, spent four years at S.P.S., where as a Sixth Former he played on the Delphian foot-ball team and was a Supervisor. Graduating in 1927, he entered Yale the following year, in the autumn of 1928, but left after one term to go into aviation. In California, he started an airline, owned and operated by him, which ran from Los Angeles to Santa Barbara. During the summer of 1933, he operated the Airport at Westport on Lake Champlain. In 1935, he took a course in blind flying at the Boeing School at Oakland, California. Meanwhile Schley had also already begun ranching, first in Colorado, then for six years in Arizona, where he owned two cattle ranches thirty-five miles apart, with a summer range that took in part of "Bill Williams" Mountain and had an average elevation of 7,000 feet. In 1941, wishing to be nearer a school for his children, Schley sold his ranches in Arizona and bought a small ranch in the Santa Ynez valley in California, where he had barely got settled when the United States entered the war.

Schley immediately decided to put his flying experience at the service of the country; and after two months' delay over his birth certificate, he got into the Air Transport Command in March, 1942, at first as a civilian pilot. He was commissioned Second Lieutenant in July, 1942, and made a First Lieutenant the following December. He served as pilot in the Ferrying Division of the Air Transport Command, based on the Army Air Field at Long Beach, California, until April 28, 1943, when he was killed near Exeter, California, in the crash of a plane which he was to have ferried to the South Pacific the following day. His Commanding Officer, Major Frank P. Thornquest, writes of Schley: "He was held in high regard by all members of this command. He was an excellent pilot . . . a splendid officer, and an outstanding character."

The Form of 1927 is making its contribution to the Alumni Fund of this year in memory of Grant Schley.

In 1933, Schley married Viola Tuckerman, who survives him with four sons, Bryant Turner Schley, aged nine; Wolcott Tuckerman Schley, aged six; Grant Barney Schley, Jr., aged three, and Kenneth Chaloner Schley, aged six months.

FRANK WILKS BROOKS, 3d, of the Form of 1933, Lieutenant (j.g.) U.S.N.R., was instantly killed May 2, 1943, when the plane he was piloting crashed shortly after taking off from Floyd Bennett Field at Brooklyn, New York.

Full of energy and promise, cheerful, eager and adventurous, quick to serve the country when war came, Frank Brooks, killed at the age of 30, had already had a varied and interesting career at sea, in business and in aviation. He was at S.P.S. four years, left at the end of his IV Form year, spent a year at the Hun School, and then entered the Merchant Marine.

Brooks, having, as a little boy, learned to sail on the New England coast, had, at 18, gone on a three months' cruise in the Caribbean, as a member of the crew of the four-masted schooner "Mopelia," commanded by Count von Luckner. A letter of commendation for his excellent work as seaman, engineer and navigator enabled him, on his return, to obtain his seaman's papers, first class.

The following year he sailed from New York as a cadet officer on the SS "President Polk," was soon made senior cadet officer, served aboard her fourteen months, and went around the world four times. He became very interested in the shipping business, cargoes and stowage, harbors and their loading facilities. In Marseilles, early in 1933, he helped avert a mutiny by persuasive talks to the crew, who, unpaid for weeks on account of the closing of the banks in the United States, were at the end of their patience.

Much as he had enjoyed his work aboard the "President Polk," Brooks, on his return to this country, left the Merchant Marine, feeling that its future was uncertain, and began studying the investment business in the firm of Nicol, Ford and Company in Detroit, and also at night school. In the autumn of 1934, he went into the Packard Motor Company, at first as a day-laborer. His experience in the Merchant Marine proved valuable in the automobile business. He was put into the Export Department, and, at 22, went to New York as Traffic Manager in the office of the Packard Export Company. In New York, he got exercise playing hockey as a substitute on the St. Nicholas team.

When, as a result of world conditions, the export business began to deteriorate, Brooks, who had held a private pilot's license since he was 18, joined George Arents, his friend and distant cousin, as manager of the latter's private airport at Armonk, N. Y. Both men were in the Naval Reserve and, when war seemed imminent, they gave up the airport and were commissioned Ensigns in December, 1941. Brooks spent several months at Floyd Bennett Field, then took a three months' course at Pensacola and was thereafter attached to the Navy Ferry Command until his death.

On Sunday morning, May 2, 1943, orders came to the Floyd Bennett Field to deliver a Navy Scout Bomber to Jacksonville, and the duty was assigned to Brooks. He obtained permission to stop at the Washington Airport for thirty minutes to see his mother, whom he had not seen for over a year. After telephoning her that he was coming, he took off and almost immediately afterwards was observed to be in trouble. He attempted to return to the field for an emergency landing; but his altitude was not sufficient and he crashed in the meadow adjacent to the station. The exact cause of the accident has not been ascertained.

At the request of the men who had served under him for a year and a half, a memorial service was held for Brooks in the hangar the following morning. On May 4 another memorial service was held at St. Thomas's Church in New York, in the chapel where he had been married seven years before. His funeral service took place at the Memorial Church in Grosse Pointe, Michigan, and he was buried with full military honors.

In 1936, Brooks had married Elizabeth Swift McMillan, who survives him with two children, Frank Wilks Brooks, 4th, aged six, and Fredericks Swift Brooks, aged three, as do his mother, Mrs. Robert O. Lord, and his brother, Oliver Newberry Brooks, of the Form of 1934.

HERBERT BRONSON SHONK, JR., of the Form of 1934, Lieutenant (j.g.), U.S.N.R., was killed in the line of duty March 25th, 1943, near Nandi in the Fiji Islands, as the result of a mid-air plane collision during group tactics practice.

Bronson Shonk had distinguished himself as a dive-bomber pilot, had fought fires below decks on the sinking "Lexington," had taught dive-bombing to men whose subsequent exploits proved the soundness of his teaching and had risen to be leader of a division of six planes and sixth in command of his squadron, when he was tragically killed at the age of twenty-six, through no fault of his own, in an airplane accident, as he was leading his division in group tactics practice ten thousand feet above the Pacific.

Shonk had spent four years at S.P.S., entering as a Third Former in 1930, and graduating in 1934. He was an intelligent boy, fond of music, a leader in the Rubber Band, and interested in all else that went on at the School. Though small and light, he played foot-ball and was captain of the 3d Isthmians. After taking his degree at Wesleyan in 1938, he went to the Harvard Law School, transferred at mid-year's to the Harvard Business School, but returned to the Law School for the year 1939-1940. He spent the summer of 1940 at the Harvard Aviation School in Falmouth, and the first half of the year 1940-1941, at the University of Buffalo taking the C.A.A. course.

In February, 1941, Shonk enlisted in the Naval Reserve. He received his flight training at Pensacola and Miami, was commissioned Ensign October 22, and reported at Norfolk November 15, to an Advanced Carrier Training Group, from which he was detached February 15, 1942, with orders to report to Bombing 2, aboard the "Lexington." When he reached Pearl Harbor, the "Lexington" was at sea and Shonk was given a temporary assignment until she returned and he was able to join Bombing 2, April 11, 1942.

Shortly thereafter, the "Lexington" shoved off for what proved to be her last cruise. Life aboard the carrier is described in Stanley Johnson's "Queen of the Flat Tops," in which Shonk is frequently mentioned. "It was," writes Lieutenant T. E. Hambleton, '30, in a letter which concludes this article, "the usual routine of alarums and excursions that are any carrier's share when the enemy is not far off and in uncertain force." Shonk saw plenty of action. When the "Lexington" was attacked in the Battle of the Coral Sea, Shonk was on board ship. In an interview which he gave a reporter of the Manchester (N. H.) Union on the occasion of his reception by the town of Dublin, N. H., he told of how he and other bomber pilots on board went below, and, in gas masks on account of the thick smoke, fought fires until a huge explosion stopped the water pumps, of how they strung lines to the water level, after the order to abandon ship had been given, aided in this effort by the news that an enterprising officer had gone below to see how the torpedoes were faring and had found them too hot to touch, of how some, himself included, who had not eaten all day lingered on board to eat ice-cream which some resourceful sailor had got out of the ship's service store, of how he went over the side, absent-mindedly wearing not only all his uniform, but also a tin helmet and a pair of dark glasses, with a gas mask slung over his shoulder and a .45 strapped around his waist, of how after he had got rid of all this superfluous equipment and nearly drowned doing so, he swam madly for five minutes to get away from the anticipated suction, only to find that he had somehow got the line down which he had climbed wound around his waist and was trying to tow the "Lexington."

Finally, after they had been picked up by a cruiser, he and Commander Hamilton watched the great carrier slowly settling and together composed her epitaph:

"Beneath the skies her planes have flown,
She lies majestic, proud, alone.
The seas hold her in their embrace;
A white-cap marks her resting place.
The mighty wind and roaring tide
Will mourn their friend who bravely died.
A gallant ship in victory,
Full worthy of her pedigree,
Even in death, how proud she fell,
How beautiful her blazing shell;
The thunder of her planes is stilled,
Her glorious destiny fulfilled."

Shonk then returned to the United States, and from that point on, his story can best be told by Lieutenant Hambleton, who has written:

"On July 31 (1942), he reported to Bombing Squadron 11. His old commanding officer of Bombing 2, Commander Hamilton, had chosen him, with several others, to be part of the new squadron he was forming. This was a period of organization for Bombing 11, when the men who had been out in the combat area began to train the ensigns fresh from Miami and Corpus Christi. Bronson was given a group of fifteen to teach dive bombing. Our squadron flies SBD's, the Dauntless dive bombers, whose mission is to push over at 10,000 feet in a seventy degree dive and release at about two thousand or twenty-five hundred on a ship or land target. It is not something you pick up overnight, it takes time and good teaching. The boys who were in that flight are some of the best dive bombers we have. Seven of them were marines who came straight out to Guadalcanal and have been decorated for their achievements. They all say that Bronson was a good teacher, and the results show they are right.

“By October, Carrier Air Group Eleven was ready to shove off for Pearl Harbor. Bronson had been made Lieutenant (j.g.) on October 2, and was sixth in line of seniority in the squadron. By the end of October they arrived at Ford Island Oahu, and then went on to the new Naval Air Station, Barber’s Point.

“In the first part of November, I joined the squadron as Intelligence Officer and met Bronson for the first time. He took me up on flights for practical training in ship recognition and together we worked out a plan by which I was to qualify as rear seat man for observation on attacks. Probably it was S.P.S. that started our friendship, and then such other subjects as music, wives and children, which we also had in common.

“He was radio officer with the squadron, and, since a radio is the difference between getting back to base and landing in the drink, the job is one of the greatest importance. It was particularly so then, when there were so many innovations in radio communication coming out and so few men that knew anything about them. Bronson did, and it was his work, in large part, with the radio men that has resulted in such good luck with our equipment out here. He was always interested in new ideas and trying to work out a means of using them in the squadron.

“After four months of training around Oahu, we once more started for the war zone—this time it was Nandi in the Fijis. Here Bronson became a division leader. After the training in Hawaii, the group had become a smooth and effective team. The squadrons had learned to work together as well as the divisions and they functioned with sureness and ease that only practice can give.

“Once a week we had group tactics in which the squadrons of the group would attack some target, usually against fighter opposition, to simulate as closely as possible combat conditions. On March 25th (1943) we were having such a problem. We were protected by P40’s of the New Zealand Air Force. As we approached the target, the attacking fighter made a pass at our second division and the leader of the New Zealanders jumped on his tail. The New Zealander pulled back on his stick but not in time to escape mashing into Bronson, who was leading the third division, just behind the second. I happened to be riding ahead and I saw the wing come off the P40 as he dove down and then Bronson’s plane go into a steep glide. It first seemed that he had his ship under control but his wing man who followed him down from our altitude of 10,000 feet saw him go straight in.

“It may sound a little ironic that Bronson, who was as good a pilot as the Fleet had, should die in this way. Not because he had made any mistake but because of the momentary failure of another with far more experience in combat flying than he. Yet, actually, all of us in the squadron know that his loss at Nandi was as much a combat loss as any we shall sustain here. Bronson always used to say that the SBD was the safest plane in the Fleet, and I think he was right. The chance that he was killed in one is not so important as the fact that many of the things he was able to do have saved the lives of others in the squadron.”

In December, 1941, Shonk had married Louise Whittemore. Herbert Bronson Shonk, 3d, their son, whom he never saw, was born October 15, 1942. Shonk is also survived by his sisters, Mrs. James P. Smith and Mrs. William Raymond, Jr., and by his brother, Peter M. Shonk, of the Form of 1936, Lieutenant (j.g.), U.S.N.R., who has been on active duty in the South Pacific as a fighter pilot for nearly a year.

ROBERT HILL COX, 2d, of the Form of 1937, Lieutenant, 2d Battalion, King's Royal Rifle Corps, was wounded at El Alamein, October 27, 1942, recovered, returned to active service early in February, and died in Tunisia April 19, 1943, of wounds received that day in action against the enemy.

The second of five brothers, sons of the late Archibald Cox, of the Form of 1892, to come to the School, where their grandfather, Edward C. Perkins, 1874, three uncles and four great-uncles, as well as many cousins, had also preceded them, Robert Cox, in his six years there, became a first-rate hockey player, on the S.P.S. and later on the Harvard Varsity, was also on the S.P.S. foot-ball team, rowed on the 2d Shattuck crew, was a very good scholar, an editor of the Horae, the best debater in the School, a Supervisor and Councillor. Into all he did, Cox threw himself with a rare combination of mental and physical vigor, of seriousness and humor, and also in a spirit of intense devotion to the School. His love of the place was expressed constantly in his actions and more than once in contributions to the Horae, among the latter the verses published in the Last Night number of his VI Form year:

ITAQE VALE

GOODBYE . . . . .
 We have lived much this year and now we dread
 To bid it all goodbye, to grab your hands
 And shake them roughly so you will not know
 How soft our hearts are now the time has come.
 It will be dark there 'neath the cloister's arch,
 You will not see the shining of our eyes.
 You'll only hear our voices and our laughs;
 You will not know the pang of each goodbye
 As we pass on to you whom we have known
 St. Paul's for you to love and make your own.

It was our school this year, but now it's yours;
And you will love it much as we have loved.
You will laugh gladly skating on the Pond.
You will laugh softly sculling 'neath the stars.
You've done those things? But not the way we have.
You have not done them for that long, last time
That means so much, when Time itself stands still,
When utmost joy and utmost pain unite
Giving you glimpses of Eternity.
Yet you will know that soon, for so have we.

And so, goodbye. We leave it all to you.
You do not know the wealth to which you're heir.
But you will know next year when you clasp hands,
Shaking them roughly so they will not know
How soft your hearts are now the time has come.
You will be glad they can not see your face,
On which the memories of your year are writ.
You will be hoping they will love the School
As you have loved it. Then you will pass on—
On where the elm trees rise to kiss the sky;
There you'll look up and whisper your goodbye.

Five years later, Cox was in the thick of the fighting at El Alamein. On graduating from Harvard, in 1941, he had joined the King's Royal Rifle Corps, usually known as the 60th, with four other Americans: Charles Bolté, John Brister, Heywood Cutting and William Durkee. They trained for a year in England and sailed for the Middle East in July, 1942. At El Alamein, in October, Cox's battalion formed the spearhead of the British drive that pierced and broke Marshal Rommel's lines and that, joined by the Americans coming from the West, turned North and has not yet been stopped. "In the night battle," wrote Charles Bolté, who lost a leg in the same action, "Cox got his gun-portees entangled in a mine-field and a lot of wire ahead of me. He signalled me on with a wave and a shout, tracer streaming around him and shells banging nearby a blazing ammunition lorry; a few minutes later he was hit in the back by a machine gunner who let us pass and shot up our rear." "No," wrote Cox to his mother, "I was not running away." Cox's wound, at first painful but not very serious, became infected, and his recovery was further delayed by an attack of jaundice. In November, he was promoted from the rank of Second Lieutenant to that of Lieutenant.

At the end of January, Cox, recovered, was given "permission to rejoin his battalion in his own time," meaning that he had to arrange his own transport, which was difficult, he wrote, "because as is customary they are doing the dirty work and are almost in Tripoli," 1300 miles to the West. Finding that the air-force could not give him a place in a plane immediately, he managed to get a lift part way with an ambulance driver, then flew from an air-port "where there wasn't any red tape," "hitch-hiked to Brigade and from Brigade got a ride to the Battalion." "I had written I was coming back," he says in a letter, "and knew I was wanted back. I have never seen anyone look so surprised as the Colonel when I drove up, for my letter took longer than I did, and no one expected me for quite a while. Still everyone seemed glad to see me."

The 60th, whose 2d Battalion Cox thus rejoined in Tripolitania, and with which he was soon to enter Tunisia, is a British regiment of American origin. Raised among the colonists in 1755, equipped and trained for wilderness fighting, it was on active service continually throughout the French and Indian War, received its motto Celer et Audax from General Wolfe, and took part in the storming of Quebec. It has ever since maintained a tradition, reminiscent of its earliest days, of pioneering and adaptation in regard to weapons and tactics and has been much employed in small detachments in scouting, in protecting the flanks of larger forces and, generally, on missions calling for speed and audacity. Nothing in the Regiment's long and eventful history is more glorious or more characteristic than the defense of Calais in May, 1940, where its 2d Battalion, in which Cox afterwards commanded a platoon, formed part of a small force of 3,000 men that, outnumbered and outgunned, short of food, short of water, almost without sleep, held up two Panzer divisions for four days, prevented their cutting the B.E.F.'s road to the sea, gave the French time to flood the Gravelines water line and so, though themselves practically annihilated, made possible the evacuation from Dunkirk.

Such, very briefly, were the traditions and the standards of Cox's regiment and battalion. When Cox was killed, Major Graham Campbell, who had been his company commander at El Alamein, wrote of him: "I not only loved Bob—he was a wonderful companion—but I admired him as a soldier. He was the finest platoon commander that I had. He always asked the maximum effort from his men, and he never got less. And all the men were devoted to him."

And Captain James Lees, Cox's company commander when he returned to the battalion, after expressing a similar opinion of Cox, wrote: "You may like to know the circumstances of Bob's death. . . . He was on a position rather removed from the rest of the battalion, and heard an enemy gun firing from apparently very nearby. He went forward on his own to see if he could spot the gun. While he was going round the corner of a building, he came upon a German soldier, who opened fire with a machine gun or sub-machine, which wounded Bob on the arm and the shoulder. The wound on the arm severed the brachial artery. He had to run about three hundred yards to get back to his position, and in doing so lost a great deal of blood from the wound in the arm. Owing to the isolated nature of his position, there was no medical aid immediately available, but his wounds were bound up and the bleeding apparently stopped, and he was put on a truck which took him to the Advanced Dressing Station. I saw him here, and spoke to the doctor, who said that when he arrived he had been extremely weak from loss of blood. It is probable that the bleeding had started again in the truck. He had been given four pints of 'plasma' at the A.D.S.; but he had to be taken to the Main Dressing Station before he could have a blood transfusion. It was during this last journey that he passed away. When I saw him at the A.D.S., he was asleep; but he woke up once and said he felt very well."

"He will always be remembered in the Regiment," wrote General Davidson, one of the two Colonels Commandant of the 60th, "not only as a man of high character and sense of duty, but as a good companion, an ideal rifleman, and a proved leader of men."

Cox's earlier friends, including those who knew him at S.P.S., will remember with gratitude the true friendship he found in the 60th, which made his service in it happy and was with him to the end. The praise expressed in the letters just quoted, high as it is, comes to us as a consolation but as no surprise. With all his humor and charm, Cox was an utterly devoted person, combining to a rare degree the capacity to think with the capacity to act. His life, cut short when it was so full of promise, has nevertheless the completeness of entire consistency. A plaque in the church at Windsor, Vermont, bears this inscription:

"In memory of Robert Hill Cox, Lieutenant in the King's Royal Rifle Corps, killed in the Battle for Tunisia, April 19, 1943, who, at the age of twenty-two, convinced that his own country should share in the great war for human freedom, joined the British Army in July, 1941, and so gave to that cause all of America he could command."

Cox is survived by his mother, Mrs. Archibald Cox; by his sisters, Miss Molly Cox and Mrs. John M. Bigelow; and by his four brothers, Archibald Cox, 1930, Maxwell E. Cox, 1941, Pfc. AUS, Louis A. Cox, 1943, Pvt. AUS, and Rowland J. Cox of the Fourth Form.

JOSEPH PRENTICE WILLETTS, of the Form of 1937, Lieutenant (j.g.), U.S.N.R., was killed August 18, 1943, in the crash of a Navy plane off Montauk Point, Long Island.

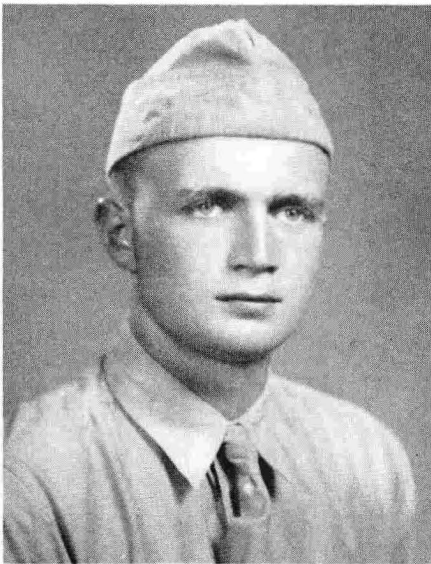

Prentice Willetts was the third member of the Form of 1937 to give his life in this war, Fowler having been killed in action off the Solomons in October, 1942, and Cox this April, in Tunisia. Like Fowler and Cox, Willetts was a first-rate athlete. At S.P.S., where he spent five years, his lack of weight—he never weighed as much as 150 pounds—was more than made up for by his energy and courage. He was captain of many of the lower teams on which he played as a little boy, and in his Sixth Form year was quarter-back of the Isthmian football team, fullback on the S.P.S., on the first line of the Isthmian hockey team, and on the second line of the S.P.S. He was captain and bow of the 2d Shattuck crew. In college he became captain of the Varsity hockey team, on which he played three years; and he was also on the Varsity soccer team.

Willetts' career in the Navy began at Harvard. As an undergraduate he took the Naval R.O.T.C. course and the advanced C.A.A. flying course. He was commissioned Ensign, U.S.N.R., on graduation in June, 1941. The following September, forfeiting his commission, he went as aviation cadet to Pensacola, where he became Lieutenant Commander of his battalion. On March 30, 1942, he received his commission as Ensign in Naval Aviation. From April, 1942 to July, 1943, he was stationed at Banana River, Florida, successively as a student pilot flying PBM's, as instructor in T.T.S.A. (Transitional Training Squadron Atlantic), as Patrol Plane Commander. In April, 1943, he was promoted to the rank of Lieutenant (j.g.), and in July he was transferred from T.T.S.A. to VP-210, first for two weeks at Norfolk, Va., and then at Quonset, R. I., for further operational training in PBM's. While based at Quonset, he was killed in the line of duty August 18, 1943, when the plane in which he was serving crashed in a routine flight off Montauk Point, Long Island.

On March 30, 1942, Willetts married Mary Louise Wiener of Milwaukee. He was a son of W. P. Willetts, 1910, who also survives him, as does his brother, G. C. Willetts, 1939.

WALTER ROY MANNY, JR., of the Form of 1939, Second Lieutenant, U.S.M.C.R., was killed in an airplane accident at Bogue Field, near Cherry Point, North Carolina, October 18, 1943.

Roy Manny left Yale in 1942, at the end of his Sophomore year, and reported July 10 for preliminary flight training at the Naval Aviation School at Chapel Hill, North Carolina. He was transferred after three months to the Naval Aviation Base at Grosse Isle, Michigan, where he remained for elementary flying training until February 19, 1943. On March 3, he began his final training at Pensacola and he was commissioned June 30, Second Lieutenant, U.S.M.C.R. From July 1, to September 10, he was at the Naval Air Station at Jacksonville, Florida, for special training in dive-bombing. On September 28, he reported for duty at the Marine Base at Cherry Point, North Carolina. On October 18, near Bogue Field, to which he had been assigned, a collision occurred in formation between Manny's and another plane. All four men in the two planes were killed, including Manny, who was 22 years old.

Manny had spent five years at S.P.S., entering in 1934 and graduating in 1939, after which he went to Taft School for a year before entering Yale in 1940. At S.P.S., as a V Former, he rowed No. 7 on the Halcyon crew of 1938, which was defeated by but two feet. The following year, he was on the Delphian foot-ball team and the S.P.S. hockey team, but, by one of those revolutions not uncommon in rowing, he failed to regain his place on the Halcyon crew. The sportsmanship with which he bore this personal disappointment and the effectiveness with which he contributed to the second crew's victory were alike characteristic of Manny. Characteristic of him also were unvarying cheerfulness and good-nature, generosity and kindness of heart, qualities which endeared him to many friends and for which he will long be remembered.

Manny was a son of W. R. Manny, 1908, and of Mrs. Manny, who survive him as do four sisters, Mrs. John Evans Rees, Mrs. Blanchard Randall, 3d, Miss May Field Manny and Miss Virginia Manny, and his brother, James Craven Manny, who is preparing to enter the School in 1946.

On September 25, 1943, only three weeks before his death, Manny had been married at Greenwich, Connecticut, to Miss Constance Lazo, who has the heart-felt sympathy of all of St. Paul's School.

ALUMNI MISSING IN ACTION

EDWARD ORRICK McDONNELL, JR., of the Form of 1939, Lieutenant, U. S. Army Air Corps, has been missing in action since April 2d, 1943.

Edward McDonnell, whose farewell flight over S.P.S. last autumn in a P-40 was recounted by Arthur Pier in the last number of the Alumni Horae, left in October, by air, for North Africa, where his squadron was attached to the British Eighth Army. He had been at S.P.S. five years, had left Yale in December, 1941, early in the Sophomore year, to join the Army Air Forces, and had graduated August 5, 1942, as a pursuit pilot. He took part in the fighting in North Africa until April 2, 1943, as of which date he is reported missing. The latest word received by his father, Captain Edward O. McDonnell, U.S.N., is that his plane was struck by anti-aircraft fire and that he was seen to bail out.

JOHN PINKNEY MURNANE, of the Form of 1939, 2d Lieutenant, U. S. Army Air Corps, has been missing in action since May 8, 1943.

John Murnane left Harvard in December, 1941, to enlist in the Army Air Corps. After training at Turner Field, Georgia, he was commissioned 2d Lieutenant in July, 1942, and left for the Far East about September 1, 1942. As navigator of a Flying Fortress, he had been for a considerable period on active service with a Bombardment Group, based on New Guinea, when he was reported "missing in action since May 8, 1943." His plane is said to have been between Nubia and Wewak, alone on a reconnaissance mission, when radio communication with it was lost and it is thought to have come down on land in Northern New Guinea, in rough but not hopeless country, from which it would take a considerable period to emerge, even under favorable conditions.

John Murnane's brother, G. F. Murnane, Jr., 1935, is mentioned elsewhere in this issue as having been decorated for meritorious work in the Sicilian campaign.

*ROBERT URQUHART DUGGAN, of the Form of 1940, 1st Lieutenant, U. S. Army Air Forces, is reported missing in action since July 30, 1943, prior to which date he had been twice decorated.

Robert Duggan left Harvard at the Christmas vacation after Pearl Harbor, and at once enlisted in the Air Corps. He was sent to Maxwell Field, Georgia. Due to lack of equipment at that time, it would probably have been necessary for him to wait six months before starting flight training. Finding that there was an immediate need for navigators, he volunteered for navigation. He was sent in March, 1942, to Mather Field, Sacramento, California, for training and was commissioned Second Lieutenant on July 25th. He was then assigned to navigational training in a Flying Fortress and trained for two months at a number of fields, including those at Boise, Idaho, and Walla Walla, Washington. In October, 1942, he was assigned to a field in the East, and from there navigated his Fortress to England, where he landed October 19th.

From England, Duggan took part in bombing raids over the continent and in December he was promoted to the rank of First Lieutenant. In January, 1943, he was awarded the Air Medal for five bomber missions over enemy occupied Continental Europe, and in February the Oak Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious service while participating in five separate bomber combat missions over the same area. "The courage, coolness and skill displayed upon these occasions," to quote Duggan's citation, . . . "were of the highest order. . . ."

After six months of combat flying, on April 21st, Duggan was taken off operations and assigned to an instructor's post at a combat crew replacement center not far from London. In July, he was recalled to his old Bombardment Squadron and, assigned to active operations, he took part in the large Fortress raids of July. In a letter home dated July 28th, Duggan wrote that in a recent raid the flak had been unbelievable in amount but that the precision of it had deteriorated sharply since his early raids. He also expressed the opinion that the quality of the German fighter pilots had markedly deteriorated during the same period. In the same letter he wrote that if he were reported missing, his family was to remember that a large percentage of the crews of disabled planes bailed out successfully. Two days later he took part in a raid on Kassel, and did not return. The War Department has reported him as missing in action since July 30, 1943.

* On November 10 the War Department reported that Lieutenant Duggan was killed in action on July 30, 1943.

*JOHN GILBERT WINANT, JR., of the Form of 1941, First Lieutenant, U. S. Army Air Forces, has been missing in action since October 10, 1943.

John Winant piloted a Flying Fortress in thirteen raids over Germany. He had been at S.P.S. two years, 1936-1938, had graduated from Deerfield and left Princeton in 1942 to enter the Army Air Force. He had been in England for over a year.

In his first raid, on August 17, although his rudder control was shot away over Regensburg, the target, Winant brought his plane across 300 miles of heavily defended enemy territory to Africa, the first stop on this shuttle mission. He was then reported missing for a few days because, shortly after he had taken off for England, engine trouble forced his return to Africa. A month later, when he had taken part in five more raids, he was made a First Lieutenant.

On October 10, fifteen minutes after it had bombed Muenster, Winant's formation of Flying Fortresses was intercepted at 25,000 feet by a large number of Focke-Wulfs and Messerschmitts armed with rocket guns. In the fighting which followed, men in the other Flying Fortresses saw Winant's plane attacked by three German fighters, and five men out of the probable nine of the crew parachuting from it. When last seen by the Americans, Winant's plane, heavily damaged and still under attack, was still in perfect control.

Winant was a son of John G. Winant, 1908, the present United States Ambassador to Great Britain, who was Second Vice Rector of the School from 1919 to 1921.

* On November 11 the War Department reported that Lieutenant Winant is safe and a prisoner in Germany.

ALUMNI RECEIVE WAR DECORATIONS

Ward Cheney, '18, Lt. Comdr., USNR, has been awarded the Legion of Merit by Admiral William F. Halsey for outstanding service on the staff of the commander, South Pacific Force. Cheney's citation states that he "voluntarily made frequent trips into the forward areas to obtain first hand information and to further increase the effectiveness of his organization. His actions contributed directly to the success of numerous missions against the enemy." Cheney joined the Navy in 1942 and was sent to the South Pacific in September of that year. He recently returned to the United States to go to Washington on official business.

Reginald F. C. Vance, '22, Col., USA, as reported in the May 1942 issue of the Alumni Horae, was awarded the Purple Heart for gallantry in action during the engagements in or around Java. He arrived in Manila seventeen days before Pearl Harbor in command of a bombardment group but immediately became General Brereton's Far East Air Force Assistant Chief of Staff A2 (Intelligence). After General Brereton had gone to Java, Vance remained on Bataan for six weeks as liaison between General MacArthur and the Bataan Air Force of half a dozen P-40's. He then went to Java by submarine where he again served as General Brereton's Intelligence Officer. From Java he went to Australia where, at Melbourne, he helped Generals Brett and Royce organize an Air Force, and later, at Port Moresby, he was in command of advance base operations. He returned to this country in September 1942 and is now in command of a Group of Medium Bombers.

Erwin Hoy Watts, '22, received the Croix de Guerre while serving with the American Field Service Ambulance Corps in 1940, the award of which was described in the July 1940 issue of the Alumni Horae.

Beirne Lay, Jr., of the Form of 1927, Lieutenant Colonel, U.S.A.A.F., has received the Air Medal. After several years' service in the Army Air Corps, Colonel Lay went to England on February 4, 1942, as one of the six original officers who accompanied General Ira C. Eaker. "There," he says, "I watched the 8th Air Force grow from a sheet of paper." In August, 1943, he reported for three weeks' temporary duty with a Fortress Group, of which one week was spent on the ground in North Africa. He started on six combat missions and completed four, one of which was the shuttle raid on Regensburg, Germany, in which he participated as pilot of a Flying Fortress, as did John G. Winant, Jr., '41. Lay was awarded the Air Medal and ordered to the United States in September for training with a heavy bomber group, presently to go back overseas. The Saturday Evening Post of November 6th contains Colonel Lay's thrilling account of the Regensburg raid, "I Saw Regensburg Destroyed," and the November issue of Harper's Magazine contains his equally thrilling article, "What It Takes to Bomb Germany." Colonel Lay is the son of Beirne Lay, '79, who was a master at the School for thirty-five years.

James Avery Worden, of the Form of 1930, Lieutenant, Groupe Sanitaire Divisionnaire, with the Free French Forces in Africa, has received the Croix de Guerre. After the French Armistice, Worden, who, since the beginning of the war, had been working as ambulance driver for the American Field Service, the American Hospital at Neuilly and the Red Cross, left France for Lisbon, whence he and a few others sailed down the West coast of Africa to join the Free French at Brasseville. As Lieutenant, in command of a Groupe Sanitaire Divisionnaire, he trained his own outfit of Frenchmen, Senegalese and others. William H. Wallace, Jr., Assistant Director General of the American Field Service, reports that, in the evacuation of the perimeter of Bir Hacheim, where casualties were very heavy, Worden led the column of ambulances through the mine fields, along with the motorized French units. From a hospital in Cairo, Worden wrote his parents that he had received the Croix de Guerre, but did not mention the date or any other particulars of the award. He is reported by the American Field Service to be still in North Africa.

Albert Peter Dewey, '35, Capt., AUS, has received three separate honors: the Croix des Combattants, the Chevalier's Cross of the Order of Polonia Restituta, the highest Polish decoration, and honorary membership as corporal in the French Reconnaissance Squadron 2/33 with right to wear the fourragère of the Croix de Guerre. The first two decorations were received while he was serving in the Polish Military Ambulance Corps in which he was commissioned in May 1940. The Corps was attached to the 1st Tank Brigade which saw action in Champagne. After the fall of France, he served in the Office of Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs in Washington. He was sent to London to see General de Gaulle in the winter of 1941. In August 1942 he was commissioned in the U. S. Air Transport Command and served for eight months in Africa. While there he received the French honor and was also asked by General Giraud to accompany him to the United States as his interpreter. He was therefore ordered to Washington. After a few days in this country, however, he again left for active service.

George Francis Murnane, Jr., '35, 1st Lt., Armored Forces, AUS, has been awarded the Legion of Merit. He was attached to the 1st Armored Corps which he accompanied as 2d Lt., Hdqrs. Co., on the Moroccan Expedition, October-November 1942. In July 1943 he was appointed aide to the Chief of Staff, 7th Army, and served through the Sicilian campaign. He received the Legion of Merit in July 1943.

William Tyrie Stevens, '35, Lt., USAAF, has been awarded the Purple Heart for "wounds received in action while serving as a navigator on a B17 airplane on a combat mission over Wilhelmshaven, Germany on March 22, 1943." A .30 calibre machine-gun bullet from an FW-190 went through Stevens' arm, breaking the bone. He was four months at the hospital in Oxford, returned to this country, and is now having some bone grafted into his arm at a hospital in the South where another alumnus, Henry Cadwalader, '32, is recovering from an injury, a broken leg, received in a parachute jump at Fort Benning. Cadwalader is a Captain in the Paratroops.

William Sprague Barnes, '36, 1st Lt., USAAF, prisoner of war since March 26, 1943, has been awarded the Air Medal, the Distinguished Flying Cross, and one Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster. He served as pilot in the Fighter Group known as the "Black Scorpions," Ninth Air Force, from El Alamein to Tunisia, and shot down his first ME-109 at El Agheila on Dec. 8, 1942. On Jan. 1, 1943 he received the Air Medal for meritorious achievement in 100 hours, and the Distinguished Flying Cross for extraordinary achievement in 200 hours, of operational flight against the enemy in the Middle East Theatre. On July 20, 1943, he was awarded one Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster for meritorious achievement in ten sorties of less than 2½ hours' duration against the enemy. The ribbon of the D.F.C. was presented to Barnes by General Brereton on Jan. 8, 1943, in the desert near El Agheila. The Cross itself, the Air Medal and the Oak Cluster were presented to Barnes' father, Mr. A. M. Barnes, at Camp Smith, Peekskill, N. Y., on Sept. 8, 1943, in the course of a ceremony at which his citations were read. Barnes was listed as missing in action over Southern Tunisia from March 26 to April 28, 1943. It was then learned that he bailed out of his P-40, landed uninjured behind the German lines and, according to recent letters, is in good health at a camp ninety miles southeast of Berlin. He has been made Officer of Education at the camp and has resumed the study of law. His address is 1st Lt. William S. Barnes, American P.O.W. No. 966, Stalag Luft 3, Germany, via New York, N. Y. Barnes' brother, Albert MacC. Barnes, Jr., '33, 2nd Lt., USAAF, is Intelligence Officer with the 51st Fighter Squadron.

Henry Stillman Taylor, '36, Lt., USNR, has received the Silver Star, the award of which was described in the April 1943 issue of the Alumni Horae.

Robert Ludlow Fowler, 3d, '37, Lt. (j.g.), USNR, whose death in action last October was reported in the April 1943 issue of the Alumni Horae, has been posthumously awarded the Purple Heart and the Navy Cross, and has had a Destroyer Escort Vessel, the "Fowler," launched at the Philadelphia Navy Yard July 3, 1943, named in his honour. Fowler's citation for the Navy Cross reads: "For extraordinary heroism and distinguished service in line of his profession as Torpedo Officer on board a destroyer during the engagement with Japanese Naval forces off Savo Island, on the night of Oct. 11, 1942. Lt. Fowler accurately set up his torpedo director and, in firing the first torpedo, secured the first torpedo hit on an enemy cruiser. Before he could fire remaining torpedoes he was mortally wounded by a shell bursting in the vicinity of the torpedo director. His courageous actions were in keeping with the highest traditions of the Naval Service."

Paul Moore, Jr., '37, Capt., USMCR, has been awarded the Purple Heart, the Silver Star and the Navy Cross. To quote from the citations, he received the Silver Star "For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity in action against the enemy in the British Solomon Islands. Lt. Moore rescued two of his men in the face of heaving machine gun fire, during the operation at the mouth of the Mantanikau River on September 27, 1942 by swimming across the Mantanikau River, which at the time was swept by heavy machine gun fire, and effecting the rescue of his men. The two men were on the west bank of the river, unable to withdraw due to the wounds they had received. Lt. Moore, seeing that these two men were unable to withdraw, gallantly and without regard of the dangers to his own life, swam the river and with the help of his Sergeant brought these two members to the safety of the east bank of the river." He received the Navy Cross "For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity in action against the enemy in the British Solomon Islands. During the offensive of the Marines, on November 3, 1942, against the enemy in the Mantanikau River area, Lieutenant Moore was commanding a platoon. By his leadership and the aggressive charges, the enemy was forced to retreat to the edge of the ocean. Although the enemy was laying a heavy barrage, the Marines forced them back. The final assault was close combat. Throughout the attack Lieutenant Moore led his men intelligently from the line until he was seriously wounded and later forced to his back, but continued to give orders until he became unconscious." Paul Moore is now in charge of the Marine Detachment of V-12 at the University of Washington.

Robert Crooks Stanley, Jr., '38, 2nd Lt., AUS, has received the Soldier's Medal, the award of which was described in the April 1943 issue of the Alumni Horae.

James Averell Clark, Jr., '39, Capt., AUS, has been awarded the Air Medal, an Oak Leaf Cluster and the Distinguished Flying Cross. "Avey" Clark joined the RAF in May 1941, trained at Tulsa, Okla., and was commissioned Pilot Officer in Dec. 1941, when he sailed for England to continue training until the Spring of 1942. Attached to the 77th Eagle Squadron, he participated in the Dieppe raid and various other operations. In Oct. 1942 the Eagle Squadron was transferred to a Fighter Squadron of the 8th Air Force. Clark was awarded the D.F.C. for shooting down two enemy planes on August 17, 1943. In all, he is credited with 4½ enemy planes and has received three decorations.

To the Alumni:

Will you write us, giving announcements of engagements, marriages, births of children and items for the Alumni Notes column, and also anecdotes and stories of your days in School? Send us old photographs, which we will be careful to return. These are all of interest to other alumni. The Alumni Office should always be advised of the death of an alumnus. Any suggestions as to the editorial policy will be welcome.

EDITORIALS

We feel sure the entire alumni body of St. Paul's joins us in extending our sympathy to the Rector on the distressing and painful injury which he sustained in July. Although he is greatly improved and has now returned to the School, it may be some time before he can fully resume his duties. The School is fortunate in having as Vice Rector Mr. Henry C. Kittredge, stalwart Cape Cod enthusiast. To him, as well as to his associate Vice Rector, Mr. Charles C. Monie, go our best wishes.

The Alumni Horae is confronted with the painful necessity of turning down for lack of room a multitude of stirring accounts of our old boys in the war. Mr. John Edmonds, war editor, is succeeding bravely in a herculean job of putting together all the material for which we can find space, and again we give him our editorial citation for distinguished service.

With this number of the Alumni Horae we enclose, in handy booklet form, a cumulative list of 1224 old boys and former masters in the armed services as of November 1st. Assuming that there are at least one hundred unreported, we can proudly say that approximately one-third of the School's alumni are now in uniform. We ask all old boys and their families to cooperate in completing this splendid record by sending the names, rank and service information of any men not yet listed, to either the School or the office of the Alumni Association in New York. We should also like to be notified of corrections in rank or branch of service of those now on the list.

The destroyer participated in the sinking of the only submarine sighted during the trip of an Atlantic convoy. When Cecil arrived at a British port he asked for a signed statement which he might present "in case they did not believe him when he told the folks back home about the battle."

'35—Lt. William B. Dixon Stroud, USNR, survived the sinking of the US Destroyer "Maddox" during the Sicilian campaign. She was hit by a bomb from an enemy plane and sank in two minutes with three-quarters of her men. Stroud was sucked under water so deep that his ears are still somewhat the worse for it. He was sent back to this country but is about to return to active duty. Previous to the Sicilian expedition, he had been on active service in the Pacific area.

'36—DeVere Oliver Thompson, 1st Lt., AUS, was taken prisoner in North Africa, December 6, 1942, and was interned in Campo Concentramento 21, Italy. Thompson, '03, was notified that he was "reported returned to duty" on October 31.

'36—Edward B. Whitman, Jr., 1st Lt., AAF, had a remarkable escape while piloting a P-39 Lightning on patrol at 11,000 feet to cover the invasion of Rendova Island in the Solomons on July 11. His plane was disabled in a dog fight with 20 Jap Zeros and, after shooting down one of them, he was compelled to bail out. To avoid being machine-gunned, he dropped to 1000 feet before opening his parachute. When the parachute opened, something snapped against his face and broke his cheekbone; he landed in the top of a tree 100 feet high and cut himself loose with his knife; then he fell the last 25 feet and broke his left arm. He had landed in a dense jungle on New Georgia Island. Barely escaping Japanese patrols, he reached the coast the next day, took to the water and swam in his life belt most of that day toward Bairoko Harbor, five miles away, where he thought American troops were stationed. After a second night in the jungle, he met two American sailors who had swum ashore ten days before from a torpedoed destroyer and had found a boat containing food, water and rifles. That night Whitman and the two sailors paddled toward Bairoko, until they came upon a landing barge in the darkness, investigated and heard Japs talking. After another night in the jungle, they set out again toward Bairoko on July 15. That afternoon a Marine Corps plane spotted them and later they were rescued by a landing barge. Whitman has recovered from his injuries and recently returned to this country. His father, Edward B. Whitman, '06, learned of his rescue before he heard he was missing.

DECEASED

'71—Grenville Kane, "after a long and happy life," died July 16, 1943 in the ninetieth year of his age at his home in Tuxedo Park, N. Y. The last surviving founder of the Tuxedo Park colony, Mr. Kane was a sportsman and bibliophile as well as lawyer and financier. Five times golf champion of the Tuxedo Club and an expert billiard player, he was also a devotee of tennis and is said not to have missed a Newport Tennis Week in forty-five years. In the late '80's he attracted attention when he sailed the racing yacht Ailsa across the Atlantic to take part in the Cowes Regatta. A collector of first editions, Mr. Kane was an advisor and consultant on rare books for the N. Y. Public Library, the J. P. Morgan Library and the Carter Brown Library, Providence. His St. Paul's School days dated back to the '60's. In 1875 he was graduated from Trinity and three years later from the Columbia Law School. For the next twenty-five years he practiced privately in New York City. In 1906 he entered the banking field as a member of Tailer & Co. and in 1922 he became chairman of the finance committee of the Erie Railroad. At the time of his semi-retirement in 1927, he was also director of five other railroads. George F. Baker, Jr., '34, is his grandson and A. Stewart Walker, '94, his son-in-law.

'78—James Goodrich deForest was born on December 16, 1858 in New York City. For many years he was associated with a trust company in Brooklyn and at the time of his retirement from business some years ago, he returned to Babylon, L. I., to live in the old home where most of his youth was spent. He died in Babylon very suddenly on June 18, 1942.

'81—Chauncey Goodrich Parker, former general counsel of the U. S. Shipping Board, died at his Washington home on July 11, 1943 at the age of 78. Member of a distinguished Massachusetts family, he was graduated from Harvard in 1885 and from the Columbia Law School in 1887. Mr. Parker was born in Newark, N. J., and attained prominence in his profession in that state before being called to Washington in 1918 as a legal expert with the old War Risk Insurance Bureau. As general counsel of the U. S. Shipping Board, he had control and direction of the board's litigated cases and supervision of claims. A notable opinion during this period was a ruling that marriages performed by the masters of American merchant vessels at sea were invalid. In 1927 Mr. Parker attended the General Conference of Nations on Communications and Transit as adviser to our representative. In 1921-22, he was president of the New Jersey State Bar Association. He was also a member of the N. J. State Guard, the N. J. Historical Society and the Newark Art Museum Association. He was the father of Chauncey G. Parker, Jr., '14, Lt. Col., USMCR., Deputy Director of the U. S. Selective Service System, and Edward Cortlandt Parker, '20, Major, USMCR., Bureau of Aeronautics.

'82—Stuart Edgar attended the School for only one session, 1878-79, and we have very little information about his life and career. He was one of that group of adventurous young men of the early '80's to whom the call of the West was more attractive than the thought of four years of college. After a period as "bronco-buster" and mining prospector, he eventually settled in Los Angeles where he engaged in the real estate business. Mr. Edgar was born in New York City on January 28, 1867 and died in Los Angeles on July 24, 1942.

'83—Lee Woodruff Groves, former second vice-president of the Metropolitan Savings Bank, died in his hotel suite in New York city on August 16, 1943, at the age of 79. Mr. Groves had not been active in business since the Metropolitan was merged last year with the Manhattan Savings Bank, although he remained a trustee of the latter institution. He was born in Chicago and attended St. Paul's from 1880 to 1883. He abandoned his plans to enter Harvard and went abroad to study. Mr. Groves was one of the oldest members of the N. Y. Athletic Club and was a veteran of the Seventh Regiment.

'85—Dr. James Pemberton Hutchinson, prominent Philadelphia surgeon, distinguished himself during World War I as head of the American Hospital in France. He sailed for Europe in 1915 as a member of the University of Pennsylvania unit of the American Hospital. In 1917, after the United States entered the war, he was commissioned a major and placed in charge of the American Hospital at Neuilly, France. For his service he was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal and was given the Cross of the Legion of Honor by the French Government. After his graduation from Harvard and from the University of Pennsylvania Medical School, Dr. Hutchinson served his internship at Pennsylvania Hospital, and, at the time he went overseas, he was on the staff of several of his city's hospitals. After the war he became medical director of the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co. In the year of his retirement from this post, 1927, he married his second wife, the well-known playwright and poet, Amory Hare. Three generations of his family have attended St. Paul's. Dr. Hutchinson died at his home, "Rocky Creek Farms," Media, Pa., on April 9, 1943, at the age of 75.

'86—The Rev. Dr. Thomas A. Conover died of a heart ailment at his home in Bernardsville, N. J., on September 29, 1943. Death came a short time after a fire had destroyed seven of the twelve frame buildings of St. Bernard's Farm School at Gladstone, N. J., which Dr. Conover had established in 1900 for the education of worthy boys of the State. He had been rector of St. Bernard's Protestant Episcopal Parish at Bernardsville from 1899, the year after it was established, until his retirement in 1939.

He also founded churches at Millington and Gladstone, N. J., built a parish house at Bernardsville in 1910, and established a nurse service in 1903 which eventually became the organization now known as the Visiting Nurse Association of Somerset Hills. During his pastorate he also served as chaplain of the Clinton Reformatory for Women and of the U. S. Veterans Hospital at Lyons. '87—George Newell Hamlin's most notable case as a lawyer was his successful defense of the Chase National Bank in protracted litigation about fifteen years ago when the Bank of France sought to recover the value of $5,000,000 in gold which had been sent to the United States by the Russian State Bank, the suit being based on the fact that we had not then recognized the Soviet government. Mr. Hamlin was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., seventy-three years ago and attended both St. Paul's and Lawrenceville before graduating from Trinity in 1891 and from the New York Law School in 1893. In 1902 he became associated with Clarence Clark Zantzing, '88, as Zantzing & Borie, architects. He was one of the designers of Philadelphia's Benjamin Franklin Parkway and he selected the site and aided in the design of the Philadelphia Art Museum at the head of the parkway. A native Philadelphian, he was a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania of which he was a trustee and member of its Board of Fine Arts. He was a fellow of the American Institute of Architecture, member of the National Commission of Fine Arts and chairman of the art commission of the Smithsonian Institution. Quoting from Paul Cret's tribute: "Here was that rare person, a public servant whose motives were never rooted in vanity, in personal gain or in lust for power. His genuine love of better things . . . and his influence is seen in almost all present-day efforts for a better organized and pleasanter Philadelphia." Many members of his family attended St. Paul's, including his four sons, C. Louis Borie, 3d, '13; W. J. Sewell Borie, '15; Major Henry Peter Borie, '20, and Beauveau Borie, '24.
